

could. I know there are many Americans who will not understand what I have done and will not be able to analyze the spirit in which I did it.

"I know that I took the only possible chance of saving McNamara's life today."

James B. McNamara stated in Detective W. J. Burns.

his confession yesterday that he did not intend to destroy the Los Angeles Times building, nor the innocent lives therein. He said:

"I put dynamite under the Los Angeles Times, and it must have hit a gas main, because the terrible explosion which followed scared me more than it did anyone else.

"I was the most surprised man that ever lived, as I had not expected any great damage would be done."

According to Darrow, James B. McNamara is going to tell all the facts to the press at a later time.

What is meant by "all the facts" nobody but Darrow and James B. McNamara know. It may mean just how the dynamite was placed. It may mean that McNamara intends to implicate others in his crimes.

As to what will happen to Ortie McManigal, reports here are conflicting.

Deputy District Attorney Horton says:

"McManigal will need to take his medicine with the rest. He will not go free. Probably he will plead guilty to the indictment charging him with exploding dynamite at the Baker Iron Works and will be sentenced for that."

District Attorney Fredericks last night promised Detective McLaren, one of the Burns operatives, that he would ask the court to give McManigal as light a sentence as possible.

Another current here today says that McManigal will plead guilty to dynamiting the Llewellyn Iron Works and that sentence will be suspended so he may be taken to Indianapolis, there to be the central figure in the federal investigation.

It is said that members of the iron workers union were named in the secret confession made by McManigal, which will be made public after the Indianapolis federal grand jury reports indictments. There is no confirmation of this.
